LISTENERS

Simeon Strunsky pleads for more and better listeners in society. He thinks it would be a great thing for any social gathering if there were one good listener present. This listener must confess that he has not read "If Winter Comes." He has not read anything, in fact, says the Wichita Eagle. Thus he gives the others a chance to tell all about it, and everybody is happy. There is much to be said for the listener. If he is a good "feeder" he helps to make those about him feel important. And, feeling thus, they are happy. Also, the good listener is loved by all. The fellow who has a stale story to tell loves the man who admits eagerly that he has not heard it. The listener, however, must be fully as well informed and as well equipped as the talker. He must listen intelligently. He must feed in a word or a phrase, or, in emergencies, a whole sentence, in order to demonstrate that he is really worth while talking to. Of course, the talkers are talking largely to hear themselves talk, and to impress the others who happen to be within range, but they will not feel right about it at all unless the listener listens intelligently.

Prediction is made by the French minister of public works, M. Yves le Troquer, that within a period of about 15 years all the steam roads in the republic will be electrified. The work is to be begun in the region of the Pyrenees, where the mountains furnish waterfalls, and next in the Alpine district. Then the work will be carried to central France, where enough power can be derived from the Auvergne, and later the north and east, together with Brittany and Normandy, will be attended to. The change will save the consumption of 8,000,000 tons of coal yearly, will promote cleanliness, lessen repair work on locomotives and rolling stock and reduce accidents.
